In the 1930s, Bela Lugosi (best-known as Dracula) and Boris Karloff (best-known as Frankenstein) were the world's two most popular horror movie actors. In the film "The Black Cat" from 1934, Lugosi and Karloff played a sinister game of chess against each other - for the life and the liberty of a young woman.

I love this book! It's great for reading aloud to children while sounding like Dracula and meowing like a cat when called for. I used to volunteer at our school library, and this book was requested a lot. It's not scary, it's just good fun. If you love reading to children, I highly recommend this book.

What We Do in the Shadows began life as a brilliant, darkly comedic mockumentary by Taika Waititi and Jemaine Clement, and it lives on as an equally fantastic television series. Most of the show's humor stems from the ways in which vampires are "just like us," whether that's bickering about chores or stressing about party planning.
